it forwards it to the real server. For instance, a user may use his browser to request a web page. The proxy server will check whether the page exists in the cache and if it can be served. If this is not possible, the request is forwarded to the real server.

Public vs. Private Proxy Servers | Trusted Proxies

When using a proxy server, your web request (i.e. whatever you type into the address bar) runs through the proxy server first, which uses a different IP address, and then connects to the website through the proxy. In short, the proxy acts on your behalf as a go-between for you and the larger World Wide Web.
