Systemic therapy also differs from family systems therapy in that it addresses other living systems (i.e. groups of people) in addition to the family, for example businesses. In addition to families and business, the systemic approach is increasingly being implemented in the fields of education, politics, psychiatry, social work, and family medicine.

I think this is even truer if we look at the relationship between systemic therapy and psychiatry. without at the same time idealising neither 'the sane'. On the other hand. Probably. what I say about social control can be said about any other facet of psychiatric practice. we have to find a way to stay in psychiatry.
